SCAM PREVENTION

Beware of QR code scams such as brushing scams. Brushing scams happen when you randomly get a package in the mail, that you weren't expecting, with a QR code to scan to "find out who sent it". It should come off as a red flag if that package does not include the sender's information on it or it is not from a known retailer and asks you to scan a QR code to find out who sent the gift. Scanning the QR code will lead you to a site that tricks you into entering your personal information or it could install malware that will steal information from your phone. You can choose to keep or discard the contents of the package but do not scan the code.

DID YOU KNOW?

The first U.S. gold rush started in North Carolina in 1803, when 12 year old Conrad Reed found a 17 pound gold nugget on his father's farm. It supplied all the gold for the nation's mints until 1829.
